Abstract. Synaethics or the logic of the relations between individual-patterns-general. This article proposes a personal approach to the hermeneutic logic, as advanced by the Romanian philosopher C. Noica in 1986. The article focuses on the logical relation established between individual, patterns and general, structured in five logical frameworks, called synaethisms. Each synaethism consists of four steps which manifest themselves as chain reactions in the logical field of existence, of civilisation, of a revolution, etc. The four steps of synaethism are: proposing a theme, analyzing it, argumenting its necessity, and revisiting the initial theme. For example, a process of acquiring knowledge begins with formulating a thesis and continues with developing it; after that a good theory on the given theme is advanced and the outcome it results in is not the end of the process, but a confirmation which opens a new research path. Synaethics is to be seen as a logic of human creation, both spiritual and social, unique and eternal at the same time.
